ALPINE, N. J., June 12.—(AP)—Acknowledging that whether Violet Sharpe had guilty knowledge of the Lindbergh kidnaping was "a matter of opinion," police slowly and reluctantly were abandoning today the circumstantial theory built on the suicide of the Morrow waiters.

The immediate reaction to the corroborated alibi of Ernest Brinkert and the establishment that another man was Miss Sharpe's companion on the night of the kidnaping was expressed in two questions to Superintendent H. Norman Schwarzkopf, of New Jersey state police.

"In view of Ernest Miller's statement and Brinkert's alibi, do you still believe Violet Sharpe had guilty knowledge of the crime? Will you publicly exonerate her?" he was asked.

Schwarzkopf gave one answer:

"This is a matter of opinion."

Still looking for John.

Miller, located at the instigation of Miss Sharpe's loyal friend, Septimus Banks, the Morrow butcher, gave a convincing account of an automobile with the maid on the night of the crime.

The police stalemate was further emphasized in their response to another question.

"Are you looking for any definite person or persons in connection with the crime?" Schwarzkopf was asked.

"Still looking for John."

The police stalemate was further emphasized in their response to another question.

"Are you looking for any definite person or persons in connection with the crime?" Schwarzkopf was asked.

"Still looking for John."

"John" was the name by which Dr. F. Condon, aged intermediary, knew the to whom he paid a large $50,000 ransom for the Lindbergh boy's return.

The remainder of official answers to questions during the day served to re-enforce the puzzling situation developing in the collapse of the interim police inquiry. But the still was admitted "of his volition" on the barest of his examination still might furnish useful information.

Many Unanswered Questions.

In addition Miller was questioned finally as "a suspect in investigation" although he was permitted to return to his Closter, N. J., home being questioned yesterday.

In pursuing this line of investigation, police claimed that several unexplained circumstances were yet to be solved.

Why, they asked, did Miss Sharpe be in her room in the Morrow service several business carding the name of Brinkert's taxi service, the Post Road Taxi Company, White Plains, N. Y.?

These investigators, said Colonel Schwarzkopf, made a careful search

Violet Sharpe's room in Englewood during the time that she was at Hopewell for questioning. Among her papers were several business cards, probably four or five, of the Post Road Taxi Company, White Plains.

Upon looking up the Post Road Taxi Company it was found that Ernest Brinkert had been the owner of the service for his first name, which means "Eric" forming a basis for further inquiry concerning Ernest Brinkert.

At another point the superintendent said poison taken by Miss Sharpe had been in the Morrow house for approximately three years and was largely used in cleaning silverware.

A further exchange of questions and answers was as follows:

"Do the police wish to make any further clarifying the manner in which the poison taken by Miss Sharpe was conducted, and the truth of her story in her integrity?"

"All questioning," said Schwarzkopf, "of Violet Sharpe at Englewood is done in the presence of members of the public, and the police have pointed out alleged discrepancies in Miss Sharpe's answers to

By Belgian Ruler Today

BRUSSELS, Belgium, June 12.
(AP)—Miss Amelia Earhart, the trans-Atlantic flyer, arrived here today from Paris for a brief visit.

She was smiling happily when Vicente de Sibour landed her ship at Haerem airrome.

The American flyer will be received by King Albert tomorrow. She was accompanied by her husband, G. P. Putnam, the American publisher.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—The Washington Post said today that a bomb was planted last night in a vacant building on Pennsylvania avenue about four-blocks from the capitol and a few doors from quarters occupied by two thousand of the veterans' bonus army.

The bomb was found, said the paper, by W. A. Edwards, of Baton Rouge, Louisiana, a member of the veterans' own police organization who was assisting metropolitan police in searching vacant structures for the revival of the council of national defense as a means of getting the country out of the economic depression.

The Post said police had just run out of 50 tramps from the buildings and structures at the corner of Pennsylvania avenue and Fourth street, northwest.

No suspicion was cast on the veterans themselves but the theory was that agitators might have had something to do with it. All of the veterans quartered in that block are from southern states.

NO SMOOTH PATH FOR HERRIOT.

The formation by former Premier Andre Tardieu of a new party to combat the policies of Premier Herriot means that the new French government will have to chart its ship of state through stormy seas.Tardieu is not only one of the strongest political figures in France but is a tireless fighter. The new group behind him has, evidently, to gain additional support, been formed on liberal grounds. While he has heretofore been the leader of the left republicans, the new party will be known as the "center republicans."The party system in France is markedly different from that in the United States. Here we have two parties which fight it out for supremacy. In France new parties are formed and new cliques banded together as parties as exigencies demand.The new group behind Tardieu is evidently formed of the least radical of both the right and left wing republicans on the central ground of conservatism. Under so able and popular a leader it can be expected to gather recruits from all the other parties.Should it gain sufficient strength to defeat the Herriot administration
it would be directed to the handling of foreign relations, and it is not surprising, therefore, that Tardieu should announce that the energies of the central republicans would be directed towards securing social and agricultural action.Tardieu is of the type of French statesmen who are intense nationalists, having traveled little and being concerned chiefly with internal affairs. Herriot, on the other hand, has traveled widely in Europe and America and has a broader grasp of international affairs.The two are the outstanding political leaders of France at this time and should the new group prove popular a general reorganization of all the parties is to be expected—accompanied by the political pyrotechniques which no other nation can produce to the same extent as France.Well, anyway, if this depression continues, eventually there will be enough parking space downtown.

THE SEAS AND THE WEATHER.

The centuries-old controversy as to whether the seas affect the weather is opened again by the claims of the scientists at the Scripps Institute of Oceanography, a department of the University of California, that the secrets of the weather are being revealed by the waters of the Pacific.In discussing these claims of successful, long-range forecasting
based on daily studies of the fluctuating temperature and chemical content of sea water, Andrew R.
Boone in the current issue of Popular Science Monthly says:Recently these forecasts have proved accurate 75 per cent of the time. How remarkable this record is can be appreciated when it is remembered that the predictions of the United States weather bureau, made only 24 hours, instead of months, in advance, are correct only 80 per cent of the time. The California scientists expect to be able to forecast periods of rainfall and drought five, 10 and even 20 years ahead through their study of the sea.Other things beside temperatures enter into the computations. A tide gauge swinging up and down on a bamboo-covered pile on the institution's experimental pier, day and night, writes its story of the restless sea on a paper-covered cylinder. Also,
each day, a small sample of the Pacific's green water is analyzed to learn whether there has been an increase or decrease in the chemicals it contains. This record of shifting chemical content is highly important. It indicates when the ocean is sappy.ing water from its depths to the surface.These gigantic undersea fountains bring colder and more acid water from the ocean's floor. They are believed to play an important part in producing wetter winters, with heavier snows in the mountains and increased danger of floods in the spring.Should these experiments develop a basis for successful year-to-year weather forecasting, widespread benefits, especially to agriculture, would result. In years of drought farmers could plant early-maturing crops requiring a minimum of moisture, while in wet summers, dry-weather crops would be taboo.The increased stability in agricultural conditions, never possible
heretofore because of the vagaries of the weather, would spread its steadiing influence to business generally, hence the experiments in the waters of the Pacific, scoffed at though they may be, are not without their possibilities for good.Our idea of a really pessimistic man would be one who keeps an airplane cranked up for use in case of an earthquake.The Chicago Tribune feels that the National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures, recently organized in that city, is "unquestion-ably the most hopeful movement for putting an end to the depression to be found today."The organization was formed by more than 2,000 delegates from 21
states, representing financial, business and farmers' associations. It will direct its efforts to the solution of the financial difficulties of federal, state and local governments
through drastic reduction of expenses rather than through the utilization of the taxing power to the limit.It takes the position that "as long as the governments, federal, state and local, confiscate their growing share of the incomes of the American people year after year no sound basis for recovery can be established."
It further holds that "the curse of unemployment must continue until business is again on a profitable basis; and business cannot be profitable as long as the governments continue to add to the overhead burden."Commenting on these statements,
the Tribune holds that the organization provides "a machine for fort-ing the facts upon the politicians who alone can end the evil," and argues that—It is idle to pretend that measures of economy will be adopted if the politicians are left to themselves. The politicians have too large an interest in waste ever to favor economy for its own sake. So, too, have the allies of the politicians, the bureaucrats and pay rollers, hungry as they are for more power, more jobs and better paying jobs. Economy, if it is to be achieved, must be imposed by the people on their governments. It can be imposed only by such a show of organization and numbers that no elective official will dare defiance.The National Organization to Reduce Public Expenditures is the nation's hope, but the hope will be a vain one if the organization consists merely of an executive committee, however able and devoted these officers

Health Talks

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADE

TALE OF THE LEFT-HANDED
GIRL WHO HAD TO BE RIGHT.My stammering reached a mortifying stage when I entered high school.High school was torture, but I don't know how I ever had the courage to go to college. College was not so bad,but they loved to sit and listen to the most teaching ruined me . . .

So I took refuge in an office.

Mother always complained I stood on the wrong side of the ironing board and I sewed the wrong way. Yet I never knew I was left-handed until my physical examination in college showed the left arm stronger than the right. At that time the right was the more skillful.

I was unable to learn to swim until my instructor suggested that I try it on the left side, and away I swam without further difficulty.

Since I've been away from my par-

do things without comment, have a good deal of time to believe

I'm not sure I'd recommend it unless you have a most honorable analyst,

for I can see how a patient might get injury than benefit out of it but finally I got rid of a lot of silly ideas as well as my stammering.

I think now I must have loved my trouble too much to part with it

I'm not sure.

Both my mother and my grandmother always insisted that I use my right hand. Then later when I began stammering I began to feel that there was something wrong with my left hand.

Even so, what sound reason can possibly give for forbidding a child to use the left hand for writing, drawing and other skilled movements if that is the hand nature ordains for it?

Elaborate plans are in order for Lawton is a strange chap. He wants only to stand on the merits or demerits of the first of his work to be seen by the producers and critics.

The brain centers of speech are very close to those controlling skilled

why it is that the hand which

NEW YORK G. O. P. URGES REPEAL PLANK

Delegation at Chicago
Adopts Proposal by Unanimous Vote.

The several states pass upon said question by conventions duly called: and it is the sense of the New York delegation that we further recommend that delegates to the several state conventions be chosen special electors rather than at general elections.

The resolution for repeal was read twice and approved unanimously without debate.

PICK UP. ... etabounded.

The closer comes the time for the resolution to come up, the more decided is the expectation evident among the delegates that a knock-down, drag-out combat over prohibition threatens.

That and relatively little else was the topic today while key men of the administration, themselves, as an attempt to formulate a harmonious program. True, there still was speculation on shelving Vice President Curtis; but the odds for his being re-nominated along with President Hoover still favored him by far.

However, now comes the opening pound of the gavel on Tuesday these two ascendant perplexities are due for much more mulling over. In the lobbies and hotel rooms one hears both that Curtis is needed on the ticket as a lure to hold the drys if they should be beaten; and that he should be replaced by a wet to counteract the Hoover reputation among the drys as their friend.

Peace Hope Slim.

It may be, in fact, Representative Snell of New York predicted today that a compromise group will be formed to end the drys' dispute by the time Wednesday brings the platform before the convention. But the signs are definitely to the contrary.

The man who more than any other might be able to give an inkling of what's in store chose not to today.

Here Are Seating Arrangements for Republican National Convention

This diagram shows how the 4,629 arena seats in Chicago Stadium, scene of the republican and democratic national conventions, are divided for the first meeting, that of the republicans, which opens June 14. On back of the platform are 178 seats for the national committee and guests. In sections K, L, M and N are 726 seats for the press. Center sections F, E and D are for 1,170 delegates, and sections A and J will seat 1,156 alternates. Behind the delegates and alternates and in the rear of the platform are guest boxes seating 602, while at the east and west ends are guest seats for 797. The stadium, including balconies, holds 25,000.

He is James R. Garfield, chairman-to-be of the resolutions committee. He sought seclusion and quiet conferences with strong men of the party soon after getting in this morning.

The administration lieutenants don't want to go beyond a pledge to submit to the people the question of retaining the amendment or approving a stipulated substitute, since Mr. Hoover is flatly on record against straight repeal. The understanding is at least one dry quarter today was that the form of substitute would be left to congress to decide.

This view has far from deterred the repealists, however, and they are ready to go directly to the convention in their cause. They are, to a man, led by Senator Nicholas Murray Butler, who appealed to the convention of four years ago to override his resolutions committee in favor of repeal. He didn't get far then, but he is looking forward instead of backward now and finds the setup more to his liking.

Report Shows Doubts.

Yet, a vote on a repeal alone is taken, the record indicates it will be repeal that is knocked down and dragged from the scene. Of the 48 states, only in four has the case for repeal so resolved itself among the republicans that their convention voted to hold a special session in Illinois, New Jersey, Indiana and Connecticut.

In the party actions looking to this convention, nine states favored re-approval or a variety of modification. The remaining states the party adopted either defeated wet proposals, adopted no platform or made no mention of the matter in the platform adopted.

Chicago took on more of a convention air today with the arrival of many more state delegations, and the first blaring of bands along Michigan boulevard. The delegates have had little on mind than that they stand around ambling aimlessly and seem undeniably casual. The prospect of a prohibition dispute interests but does not excite them.

Ogden Mills, secretary of the treasury, and former Senator Henry Allen, of Kansas, were among today's arrivals.

Farley in Town.

Not even the presence of the manager for Franklin D. Roosevelt's campaign could stir him this morning. Goading him quietly his way of ambling on even side, James A. Farley laughingly explained he was in the city to make some final arrangements for the Roosevelt headquarters to be opened for the democratic convention late in the month. He leaves tomorrow.

Newspapermen in town him also the in which the Roosevelters are backing Senator Walsh, of Montana, for permanent chairman, against Jouett Shouse. The situation, he said, "is shaping up all right. We have the votes. If we didn't we wouldn't have started this."

Frank Burke, general counsel for the republican national committee, started a whirl of speculation when he told questioners Garfield had brought with him "more than" a tentative platform draft. He'd go no further, referring questions to Mr. Garfield, who had kept himself from the gathering claus.

Workmen busied themselves again through the day in getting the last touches onto the job of preparing the stadium for the convention.

In a dingy little hallway outside a cluster of people before a red curtain, a sign showed interest in the most agitated question to come up.

They were watching the man laboriously pin side by side a number of little tickets bearing the words "want beer."

Workmen busied themselves again through the day in getting the last touches onto the job of preparing the stadium for the convention.

At the "Cuisine," operated by the jaunty "Dolly" Weisberg, whose recent ocean voyage to take his two dogs "for an airing" made front-page news, the drinks were equally costly. Chicago and Illinois politicians crowded in their favorite saloon a block from the city hall. Guests in the city who like food with their drinks frequented Dago Mike Mangano's places on the near North Side.

Hundreds went in and out of the steel-caged entrance of the vast speakeasy on West Madison, just outside the Loop. The place is reputed to be the "biggest speakeasy in the world."

Proprietors who opened up branch establishments on West Madison explained that they were afraid the convention visitors might not find their regular places. Lofts, garages, basements, rooms, old warehouses and empty storerooms were fitted out hastily with makeshift bars and cheap tables and chairs. Those places will be abandoned after the conventions are over.

G. O. P. Committeewomen Arrive

Three G. O. P. national committeewomen are snapped in Chicago as they arrived to attend the republican national convention. Left to right they are Mrs. Wilma Sinclair Levan, of Ohio; Mrs. Bina West Miller, of Michigan, and Mrs. Manley Fossen.

Platform Builders Find Prohibition Main Plank

BY CECIL M. STEPHENSON. CHICAGO, June 12.—(AP)—In an atmosphere tense with uncertainty, administration leaders went determined to win today at the national convention scene to build the republican platform around the key resolution prohibition plank.

James R. Garfield, of Cleveland, the master carpenter selected by the republican high command, came to Chicago with the batch of tentative planks drawn in Washington and planned the bulk of the last week and plunged immediately to the task.

Prohibition was the all-absorbing topic of Garfield's conferences, both with party leaders and with newspapermen, and tonight the republican chieftain was silent, despite the din of the wet and dry conflict, on a re-submission approval.

Smiling and quick in repartee, Garfield faced the newspapermen late in the day in the office of Chairman Fess, the national committee. He was quite as emphatic that no iron-bound plank had been built up by him from the capital and that everything was up to the committee.

Yes, he had talked with President Hoover on prohibition and had his ideas on the prohibition and other dry issues. "I have no specific plank from the president," he said.

So artful was Mr. Garfield, middle-aged son of the late president, in his newspaper conference, that the veterans, Senator Fess and James Francis Burke, counsel of the national committee, who flanked him, expressed open admiration of his repartee.

"You did fine," beamed Senator Fess rising from the edge of the seat he had held in obvious anxiousness as Garfield had been seated. "You did a good job, and I am sure the barbershop questioners are satisfied."

Leaders Shy From Press.

The uneasiness and frank relief of the conference was indicative of the atmosphere pervading national headquarters. The absence of old guard republicans who have ruled past conventions. Most of them were held in Washington by the failure of congress to adjourn.

"It is impossible," said Mr. Garfield in a speech to newspapermen he had obviously prepared, "to forestall the actions of the resolutions com-

MILLS REITERATES SUPPORT FOR CURTIS

White House Statement Quiets Pre-Convention Rumors.

BY CECIL B. DICKSON.

CHICAGO, June 12.—(AP)—President Hoover might have another running mate in 1932 quieted tonight with the reiteration of administration support for Charles Curtis.

Secretary Mills, one of those closest to the chief executive, eliminated from speculation over the vice presidential nomination by the time the names of Charles Curtis and Mills had been mentioned frequently in conversations over the vice presidency.

"I am for Charles Curtis."

Mills, fresh from the White House, made his position known as he walked into a meeting of the New York state delegation.

Earlier in the day the names of Charles Curtis and Mills had been mentioned frequently in conversations over the vice presidency.

"There is a certain psychology here for another vice presidential candidate. However, the movement is all below the surface and is hard to measure. There were even some of him and Mills going around showing 'We're for Dawes' or something like that you could more accurately gauge the situation."

Turbulent Vets 'Talked Down' After Heckling Senator Lewis

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(AP)—Speaking from the top of a taxicab, Senator Hamilton Lewis, Illinois, today addressed a turbulent crowd of veterans at the "bonfire expeditionary force" camp and talked them down after facing a barrage of heckling.

He said he wanted them to remember they, like himself, were soldiers and conduct themselves as such. The noisy audience quieted somewhat as Lewis proceeded. He said he would try to get supplies through the war department or other government agencies.

As he departed he was given a great cheer.

He said afterward that leaders had told him the group that confronted him at the camp and finally dispersed, advised, "Go to the ticket office." He stood in a corner, "that's up to the convention."

There was still some talk, too, about Governor Theodore Roosevelt, of the Philippine Islands, as a possible candidate.

Correct Time for Everyone

More than 4,000,000 homes throughout the United States are now supplied with electric clocks, which run accurately, and the public is saving money.

There is a certain psychology here for another vice presidential candidate. However, the movement is all below the surface and is hard to measure. There were even some of him and Mills going around showing "We're for Dawes" or something like that you could more accurately gauge the situation."

Doubt whether another candidate would be placed in nomination brought conferences today between party leaders behind closed doors. Walter Newton, one of the president's secretaries, arrived from Washington and expressed the view that Curtis would be on the ticket. He stood in a corner, "that's up to the convention."

GRANT AND LOTT WIN NATIONAL DOUBLES

Wouldn't You Like To Ride a 400-Pound Turtle in Its Element?

COVE HOTEL, PANAMA CITY, June 12.—We rode 20 miles out into the gulf until the white strip of beach and the green fringe of palms were gone. Captain Milton Kirkpatrick was at the wheel and with him rode Captain Malcolm Caswell, the tanned young man with the gay, careless laugh who dives down and kills sharks and devil fish with his hunting knife.

We were out to troll for king mackerel and bonito, but if there were any turtles to dive down and ride up Caswell had promised to give us all that thrill.

OUT 20 miles there is a great reef. And on it lurk all sorts of great fish. They will not come close in shore to the beautiful beaches about the hotel. But out where the waves roll high and the big ships go they are to be found in all tropic waters.

Soon we were over the big reef which by some upheaval had reared itself up there, leaving but some 15 or 20 feet of water for ships. Only the small ones can go there and a big, booming bell buoy marks it.

There were 10 of us on the boat watching in the bright green water for the gray shadows in the water that mark the big fish. Caswell stood on the bow of the boat watching closer. He sighted a shark, 11 feet long, and we gave chase. The boat was headed over in the big rollers, almost shipping water at either side as the desperate chase went on.

Suddenly Caswell signaled for the boat to be slowed down. The motor was cut and as the boat slowed Caswell flung the harpoon. It landed, but so tough was the shark's hide that the harpoon failed to penetrate deep enough.

Caswell got ready to go down after him. He stood poised for the dive, his knife in his teeth, and then there suddenly swam into view three large sharks followed by two or three smaller ones. Frantic yells warned Caswell in time.

From there we went to the other side of the big reef, a mile, and sighted a turtle. The harpoon hit him and held for a time, but he swam to the top, showing us his big head and shell, and then plunged down in a dive, shaking loose the harpoon.

Caswell again mounted the bow of the boat and directed the search for the turtle, a big one. A rope was made fast about Caswell's waist. He dived for the turtle and missed. The hunt went on again.

Now it should be reported that a sea turtle is no gentle animal to go for. They can snap a new two-by-four pine timber very easily indeed. And an arm or leg would be just a breeze for a sea turtle to bite right off.

The boat swung this way and that and then suddenly the turtle came up for air and we were on him. We had moved nearer the location of the sharks, but Caswell leaped again.

He disappeared from sight. There was a great stream of bubbles and a whirl in the water. Caswell and the giant turtle appeared almost at the same time. Caswell was on his back, holding him by the shell and keeping his head close to the shell so that the turtle could not swing back and bite.

The turtle appeared to be about the size of the largest bass drum in the world. His four flippers were going at a great rate, churning the air and the water. Caswell yelled for someone to grab the flippers and two of the more venturesome in the boat grabbed them. That turtle needed a manicure. His nails were huge and pointed. Maybe he had just had one. Caswell swung into the boat while four men held the two rear flippers. Hitches of rope were passed about each of the flippers and the turtle was made fast. It required six men to lift him into the boat.

It was all over in a short time and yet while it lasted it was one of the most magnificent thrills in sport. The appearance of Caswell with a 400-pound turtle in his arms, coming up from 20 feet of water, was a new thrill.

Weighed at the beach, the turtle, with his barnacle-encrusted shell, was found to weigh 402 pounds. Small boys fed him large pieces of planking just to see him rip them into pieces.

And later he was dressed and made ready for turtle soup.

Bob Sealy, who has lived in this section all his life and who is helping make Panama City a real city, had never seen Caswell perform. Few of those who have lived all their lives on and by the sea have seen a turtle captured under water. It is a simple matter to catch them on the beach and ride them or turn them over. But to dive into shark-infested waters and match skill with them in their own element is another matter.

Caswell will go after shark if paid enough for the performance. Or devil fish. He prefers larger shark. The larger the better. They can't turn as quickly.

And if the turtle episode is a sample, he can save the shark and devil fish act. It is dangerous to watch, even participate in.

Jack Mooney Seeded In Mid-Dixie Tourney

SPARTANBURG, S. C., June 12.—(AP)—Fifty-seven entries from all parts of the south and southwest will begin play here tomorrow morning in the second annual mid-Dixie tennis tournament with W. Hines, of Columbia, S. C., on hand to defend his men's singles championship.

Seeded performers are "Lefty" Bryan, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Hines; Jack Mooney, of Atlanta; John McDermid, Fort Worth, Texas; Fred Andrews, Birmingham; "Doc" Barr, Dallas, Texas; Robert Stewart, Nashville, Tenn., and Kendall Cram, Nashville, Tenn.

Other entries for the men's events include Payne Kennedy, Spartanburg; Corbin Graves, Greenville; Burns, Bowdoin, Miami, Fla.; Harley Shuford, Hickory, N. C., and Bill Ellis, Columbia, S. C.

Julia Pickens, Clemson College, S. C., will defend her title in the women's singles.

RUTH HITS TWO AS YANKS WIN OVER INDIANS

Jimmy Foxx Slams His 22d as Athletics Lose to Tigers.

NEW YORK, June 12.—(UP)—The Chicago Cubs took a firmer grip on the National league lead today by beating the runner-up Boston Braves, 5 to 3, in a 13-inning pitchers' battle.

Guy Bush of the Cubs, was victor in the main battle, closing out his 13th win, while Bob Cantele allowed 12 to Chicago. Fred Frankel relieved Cantele in the thirteenth inning after the Cubs had made all their hits and scores.

REDS DROP ELEVENTH.

The Cincinnati Reds dropped their eleventh game in their last 12 starts with a 6-5 loss to the Philadelphia Phillies.

Tommy Hembree, the Philadelphia scoring Flint Rhem allowed Cincinnati six hits, while Kopl and Johnson were found for 10.

St. Louis at Brooklyn was washed out as was Pittsburgh at New York.

Detroit at Cleveland and both places in the American league by defeating the Philadelphia Athletics, 8 to 6. A three-run rally in the fifth inning and a four-run parade in the seventh contributed to the Tigers' victory.

George Earnshaw was the victim of the Tigers' victory.

Eric McNair and Jimmie Foxx had home runs for the A's. It was Jimmie's No. 22 of the season.

Walker started at bat for Cleveland, driving in four runs.

Babe Ruth slammed out his nineteenth and twentieth home runs of the season to lead the New York Yankees to a 13-to-5 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Both of Babe's four-baggers came with Joe Sewell on base.

These home runs brought Ruth even.

game-for-game, with his 1927 record

season, when he had made 20 home runs in 16 games. Today was the fifty-second of his 22d.

SOLONS LOSE TWO.

Chicago's White Sox defeated Bos- ton's Red Sox, 4 to 1, in a sloppy game, in which Boston made three errors and Chicago four.

The St. Louis Browns took both the first and second halves from the Washington Senators, 4 to 1 and 4 to 0. In the opening contest, Southern Paul Fischer pitched his first game for the Browns and limited his former Senator teammates to seven hits, while Coffman and Ragland yielded eight to the Browns.

THE SPORTLIGHT

By Krautlow Rice

An Improved Schmeling.

KINGSTON, N. Y., June 12.—The first thought on seeing Max Schmeling in his Kingston camp was this—that Sharkey may have made a big mistake in not winning two years ago when he had the jump of Max before the foul arrived in the fourth round. The tanned, black-haired German has come a long way since Endicott and 1930. He was not quite sure of himself at Endicott. He was much slower. He was much cruder.

The Schmeling that stepped out upon the open porch at his Kingston cottage, set upon a woodland upland, was something entirely different both mentally and physically he has found an assurance and an adjustment, which seem to go with the title and the championship at 26.

Travelers' Aid Work Impressive, Reports Show

It was with spiritual significance that the reports of the Travelers' Aid Society impressed the group gathered at the luncheon held Friday in Rich's tea room, from the note that came from the national convention as quoted by Mrs. J. W. Payne, executive secretary, to the very questions and answers that were brought forth by the findings in national as well as local situations.

For example, in a study of the national of children under 16 traveling alone during the last eight years amounting to 50,000 children, there were 39 of them in Atlanta during this last month alone! Discovering the powers of departure of these children, the Travelers' Aid, in its efforts to leave and return them on the proper paths backward or forward, is the tremendous task of sympathetic and understanding women stationed by the Travelers' Aid at the various posts of care.

Marion and Jay Chapman left Monday for Florida. They will visit Jacksonville, Augustine and other places of interest. The Travelers' Aid at the various posts of care have been put on Fernoway drive.

Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Stewart and family attended the Smith reunion at Gainesville Sunday.

"There is a cropping up all over the country of a large transient population—a great drifting mass including whole families," says Mrs. Payne.

Culbertson on Contract

The Squeeze Route to a Slam.

BY ELY CULBERTSON,
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst

The squeeze play, which is now quite generally recognized by good Contract players everywhere, makes possible the realization of many contracts doomed to defeat by frontal attack. The squeeze, as I have frequently explained, means placing one or both opponents in a position where they are forced to give up their defense at some point along the line where the "battle" is joined in the struggle of the "postboard armies" in order to safely retain another "stronghold," the surrender of which means inevitable defeat.

Mr. Austin Cooley, of New York, sent me the hand printed below in which, through the utilization of all the force of his hand, he was able to effect a perfect squeeze, thereby netting a Small Slam on a hand which had apparently been overbid.

I shall not comment upon the bidding, but Mr. Cooley, who sat South, and his partner, North, received a contract of six with both to the conservative very liberal estimate of the trick-taking power of the cards they held.

The opening lead was the spade King, which held, and, as West's holding clearly showed that South could not be holding up the ace for the Bath. Cooley, for lack of something better to do, continued the suit. The second round of spades was ruffed in the closed hand, and preparation for the squeeze made. A small club was led to the Dummy, and another spade led and ruffed in the closed hand. East's last spade was dropped on the table. The adverse trump was then picked up and the Ace, King and a small heart led in turn, the third round being ruffed in the closed hand. The second step in the execution of the squeeze had thus been completed.

South now continued to lead two rounds of trumps, and the application of the squeeze found his opponents helpless. East was compelled to retain the heart Knave so long as the heart Ten remained in Dummy. West could comfortably discard one spade, but had to hold the other honor to prevent the Ten in Dummy from becoming a trick winner. West was therefore compelled to discard a small

STATE GETS 7 MILLION IN SENATE AID BILL

Final Test on Relief Measure
Expected To Come This Week.

WASHINGTON, June 12.—(P) Georgia would receive approximately $7,000,000 from the democratic emergency relief bill as adopted by the senate. Senators Walter F. George and John S. Cohen said after careful study of the measure.

This money would be distributed through such agencies as might be designated in various forms of relief, such as promotion of public works, application to the destitute, or a back-to-the-farm movement.

House approval and signature of the president is necessary before the bill can become law, however, and the conference committee of the house and senate have up to the present been unable to agree.

The Georgia senators said that there was some house opposition to the senate bill, which was somewhat different from the house measure.

Sharp increases in business failures and extension of commercial lending for the first time this year were revealed in the report.

"Financial indications reveal a slight improvement in the general business situation during the first week of June," the department said today in its weekly review of domestic conditions.

Sharp increases in business failures

and extension of commercial lending

for the first time this year were revealed in the report.

"The decline in outstanding loans of the federal reserve member banks was halted, and commercial borrowings expanded $46,000,000.

"Bank debits outside of New York were also higher, business failures were also higher."

"Freight car loadings, generally considered one of the most accurate indications of business, increased by 5,511

cars as a result of larger loadings of merchandise, grain, coal and coke.

"Automobile production contracts and automobile contracts awarded were higher than in the preceding week. Building contracts have increased steadily since the beginning of March.

"Wholesale prices maintained a firm tone for the first time since the closing week of April," the survey

said.

"The week was the moderate rally in which prices began the up-trend.

"This broke a decline of eight consecutive days as rubber and oil has developed in anticipation of the new federal tax schedules which go into effect this month. This buying is not in heavy volume, but is none the less welcome

to various industries.

"Merchants and manufacturers alike continue to report exceedingly low inventories, and the agricultural states

say that the dearth of normal stockpiling

during the past two years means that the full capacity production for a solid

year or more may be necessary to catch up once the turn appears.
